"On Kearsarge Trail, the Lowest Pass Entering the 'Sierras'"

"One of Many Camping Spots"

THE High Sierras are full of vast forests and mountain streams running down into lakes in the center of level valleys, covered with a luxurious growth of grasses, high ferns, wild roses, laurel and wild sage, with wild life looking at you from all sides, from the tiny chipmunk running up the tree, chattering all the way, to the giant old grizzly eyeing you from a distance across the marble basin.
