Need A Sponsor—

Three young ladies from Lone Pine came into the office this week and made an unusual request. They want a sponsor for a girls' Little League team.

They said they had 15 or 16 youngsters who wanted to play baseball and if they could get a sponsor in Lone Pine, they thought maybe the Independence girls might form a team and they could play them, as well as give the boy Little Leaguers a run for their money.

And they well, could, too. For I've seen one of the girls, Helen Heston, playing ball with her brother and some of the Little Leaguers this spring. The other two have good baseball backgrounds, too. They are Tamara Daugherty, whose dad, Bob, has been a fixture at first base for the Lone Pine Gophers for several years, and Bill Fogarty, manager of the White Sox of the Little League.

Anybody want to lend a hand?

Missed—

Sunday Nadine Vaughan took off for Death Valley early with friends to play golf. She didn't want to call anyone that early to tell them she was going.

But was she surprised come Monday morning that so many inquiries had been made as to her whereabouts. It seems her mother had dropped by to see her and found the car and no Nadine. And then other friends did the same and it was not until she returned home that fears were allayed.

It's good to know that someone worries about you when you are out of town.

Weather—

As usual, the weather is a favorite topic this week with the late
