LOST GAMES

It would be a great misfortune
If a champion ever came
Who was so very skillful
As to never lose a game.
'Twould ruin one forever
If he were not to meet,
'Mid his success and prowess,
An occasional defeat.

On life's great course we struggle.
The trophy is the same—
Success. But he who enters
Will sometimes lose a game.
When, lo! the meet is over
We reckon gain and cost,
Our greatest values may be
The games that we have lost.

—Clarence Edwin Flynn.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS . .

Fifty-year old portrait on this page of beautiful Emelia Thea Erickson is by now extinct New York Portrait Company, Hudson, Wisconsin; "Retrospection" photographs on page 5, are by Lone Pine's capable photographer Allan W. Ramsey. 80-year old photographer Ramsey, still actively engaged in his profession, has a vast collection of photographs and negatives of increasing intrinsic value as the decades slip by.

Watch for next month's issue with Lone Pine's Fire Brigade of 1885.

In Memoria . . .

Emelia Thea Erickson

March 31, 1870 - August 28, 1944

Beloved Mother of

LOUISE J. HENDERSON

"When God made the stars and the sunshine,
The rain and the flowers and the trees,
He also created a Mother,
Because she was like unto these."

SENTENTIOUS ANECDOTES

Administration "Gimmees"

The public doesn't realize that in 1917, on a turnover of $85 billion, industry had a profit of 10% after taxes, while in '43, it had virtually the same profit in dollars, on a turnover of $295 billion, or only 2.5%.—Frederick C. Crawford, Nat'l. Assn. of Manufacturers.

Gratuities

I only wish I could be there personally to join with my friends in Lone Pine in the cooperative work which is making this community asset [Ed.—Lone Pine's Community Plunge] possible. In lieu of that, please accept my humble cash gift enclosed, to be applied as you see fit.—Lt. George W. Savage, USNR, NAS, Navy 28, Exec. Dept. c/o Fleet Post Office, San Francisco, California.

Will you please add this to the swimming pool fund? I wish I lived nearer Lone Pine and could actually help build your pool. — A. L. Paulsen, Purchasing Agent, American Potash & Chemical Corp., Trona, Cal.

Small Business Squashers

As a matter of fact, I am a lot less concerned with the big corporation than I am with the disappearance of the little company. The reason for my concern is best emphasized by a very tragic and gruesome experience through which we have gone in recent years . . . It is very important to realize that fascism never comes to power except in countries that have a sick middle class. Where there is thriving, independent, healthy middle class, democratic life expands.—Leo Cherne, author of a startling "MUST" best seller—"The Rest of Your Life."

Logrolling

SAWDUST . . . in my opinion, is extremely well done and unless I am mistaken, it must have a very high readership among those who receive it. As one publisher to another, I congratulate you on a piece of constructive advertising.—J. G. Maynard, General Advertising Manager, U. S. Gypsum Co., Chicago.

Logomachist

Just a few lines to ask you, if you could send me the last two editions of SAWDUST, and to keep me on your mailing list if possible. It's quite an interesting little magazine, even though I don't agree with some of your political ideas.—Ted Carrasco, S 2/c, USS Wyandotte Detail, San Francisco.

Mucus Slinging

Senator Jerrold L. Seawell, director-general of the Mayo campaign [Ed.—Jesse M. Mayo, congressional candidate], in some way learned last week that Engle [Ed.—Capable incumbent Clair Engle] had written "letters of sympathy to Japanese in the camp." He promptly charged that Engle was trying to make Japanese friends and influence their votes by this means, and a statement to this effect was issued over the signatures of . . . When the little congressman read it, he blew his top. . . . Seawell had neglected to mention, Engle asserted, that there was only one letter of sympathy and that it was addressed to a Japanese woman, Mrs. Tiri Arikawa, formerly of Placer county, whose son, an enlisted man in the U. S. Army, had been killed in action in Italy.—M. F. "Pop" Small, United Press Staff Correspondent.

Again, Lone Pine's 4th of July was duration-quiet. Above, 4th of July in center of Lone Pine's business district more than 20 years ago. Flag pole in center of Main Street was at intersection where Bank of America now is. To identify plump girl in long, white dress, refer to February's SAWDUST.

Jovial Jim Mills got off to his usual flying start the first day of this month in appropriate observation of his birthday. This writer and son Bob together with Charlie Sumner sat in on some sumptuous fried chicken as served up by Mrs. Jim . . . Speaking of natal days, we had one last month. Genevieve Naffziger presented us literally with a box of ropes—cigar-length pieces of sash cord with neat bands of white ribbon. She assuaged our feelings later, in these days of few and far-between stogies, with a box of the real article. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Dow, with the beneficent assistance of Ben Baker also augmented the private stock with a box of genuine Havanas. Radio veteran Bill Sharples presented us with a chunk of bacon. Other items too numerous to mention were topped by two monogrammed handkerchiefs from mother-in-law Erickson, who has since passed on . . . Many a person approaches the coroner at 60 miles an hour . . . July 27th will perhaps always be a high point in Jimmy-the-Red's life. A boy arrived that day for Phil and Virginia Novak, and they named him Jimmy . . . Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stringer on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary! They were married in the home of Mrs. Stringer's mother, and she was in attendance at last month's celebration . . . The overall lumber freeze went into effect the first day of this month. Yard foreman Whispering Slim Honerlah made the sad mistake of dropping down to the lumber-yard for a can of polish on Sunday morning before the freeze. He looked at the clam-oring throng, took to his heels, and for the balance of the day his address was unknown . . . Irvin Cobb once remarked that if he had to go crazy he'd prefer to have it happen in Washington. There, nobody would notice it . . . Lone Pine's likable minister Marvin Johnson has moved on. We'll never forget his barrel sequence in that Red Cross benefit "Coast to Coast". Rev. and Mrs. Robert Kersey, fresh from Indiana, are now occupying the parsonage . . . Proficient bartender Ed Attaway didn't like the cover on last month's SAWDUST. In fact he asked us to cancel his subscription. Ed vehemently asserts that capable bar-tenders are not monkeys . . . The ultimate in tranquil moments: Quietly conversing with the Dows in the lawn swing on a warm starlight night . . . Some parties are formal; at others you wear your own clothes . . . Recent pinochle near-tragedy: Julius Mahrt erroneously bidding 460 on a sequence and double pinochle. Benny Rosenbach was benignantly holding a hand with the necessary jack of diamonds . . . Speaking of Benny, you who know pinochle, can well appreciate Benny's sigh of relief when he took "terrific chances" with a bid on 100 aces, and then picked up three more in the "widow". As Benny grinned: "It fordiffies my hand!" . . . The height of something or other: Sending a telegram to an individual in Indiana with a Whittier street address and Los Angeles destination . . . One of our lady customers confronted with the lumber freeze told us that everything in life eventually adjusted itself except a girdle . . . Definition of a flirt: A hit-and-run lover . . . Next time, caustic Bob Bryerton superintends a tunnel job, those who have worked with him before should be amazed at his calm demeanor. Bob couldn't "bawl-out" the fellows donating their time building Lone Pine's Community Plunge—not even when one of them neatly wired a crow-bar into the net-work of reinforcing steel. And then there was the time when a wall section had been poured with reinforcing rods neatly calculated in the precise place to tie concrete steps to later. Somebody came along with the bolt cutters and nipped them off so he wouldn't trip over them again. Nor will Bob be apt to forget that stunning second when someone slammed him in the side of the head with the business end of a shovel. Whirling around prepared to fight it out, he was a bit crestfallen to find it was none other than tough little Mike Baker . . . And speaking of little Mike, he had a choice tidbit and another not so choice when playmate Bill Yeager ambled over. Mike offered the not so choice item to Bill who said: "If you were a nice little boy you would let me take my choice." Whereupon Mike defiantly replied, "I ain't that kind of a boy." . . . A little research in connection with the latest addition to positions created in the Inyo County school system, brings to light the following: When Mother Dorothy Clara Lathrop Smith Cragen engineered the creation of the position of Director of Visual Education (a soft plum with a monthly stipend of $175.00 plus certain financial emoluments), she arranged that the position should be "given", according to the Inyo Independent of Aug. 13, 1943, to daughter Mavis Smith Cain O'Neal Slater. In addition to mileage and incidental expenses to numerous "conferences," "conventions," etc., many of which have been made jointly by mother and daughter, the position has been paying $25.00 monthly for traveling expenses. Mother and daughter both live in Lone Pine, although their offices cover a large portion of the upper floor of the courthouse in Independence. Recently, we find mother has raised daughter's traveling allowance from $25.00 to $40.00, and in view of the "progressive" tendencies of the County Superintendent of Schools, it has caused some people to wonder what the limit in this regard may be . . . A hick town is one where there's no place to go where you shouldn't be . . . Jimmy - the - Red returned from Minnesota with a little less than when he departed from Lone Pine. He left his tonsils back there . . . We had the privilege of sitting in on a couple of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bryerton's unsurpassed outdoor trout fries. Charlie Cord was present both times, and didn't ask anyone to pass the mustard . . . Good news: CPO Bob Loundagin being assigned to duty at the Inyokern Naval Ordnance Test Station . . . Sleazy Bert Poulson, bar-fly and ex-employee of this lumber business, brought a big bouquet of roses around to the house for the wife, and was disappointed to find that she was in Minnesota. Maybe that guy isn't as dense as yard-foreman Slim Honerlah thought. The wife is a full-partner, and to many, the nicer half of Lone Pine's lumber business . . . Distinguished guests of the month: Senatorial candidate Fred Houser and attractive wife . . . Young J. W. McKinney bounced into Lone Pine from Whittier, eagerly taking in the sights of his old haunts. J. W. announced that his dad couldn't come along because he didn't have any teeth . . . Again we conclude this column with our deepest sympathies to those a famed war correspondent had so ingratiatingly endeared himself to not only in Lone Pine, but all of Southern California: Tom Treanor.
